Description

This course is an introduction to the modern international system. It begins with the early principles of American foreign policy. It examines the origins of World War I and why the Wilsonian moment crumbled into isolationism and depression. It explores the rise of fascism and the sources of World War II. It discusses how the United States and Europe constructed the post-war order. It examines the politics of the Cold War and the atomic age. It reviews the fall of the Berlin Wall and what followed: the unique moment known as the “end of history” characterized by rising living standards and the spread of democracy across the globe. The final part of the course reviews the evidence for the return of history: the “clash of civilizations” thesis, the War on Terror, the politics of autocracy in China and Russia, and institutional decay and anti-globalist backlash in the United States and Europe. The course concludes with a discussion of the far right in comparative perspective and the role of propaganda in contemporary world politics.

This course has two goals: to introduce students to the substantive history of the modern international system and to qualitative research methods in political science. Accordingly, this course has a heavy reading and writing load. In particular, it asks students to engage with primary source materials. Weekly sections will be devoted to reviewing concepts from lectures and readings and to discussing and practicing the craft of essay writing focused upon historical cases.

Requirements

Students are expected to have read all assigned materials prior to class. Weekly reading assignments will average roughly 150 pages and will be available via Blackboard unless required for purchase. Several of the primary source readings are readily available online and do not appear in the readings folder.

Students will complete two essays. In each, they will develop an argument based on a careful analysis of historical case material. Essays will be five to six double-spaced pages long and must be uploaded to Blackboard by 11.59pm PST on the due date. For each day the essay is late, one letter grade will be deducted.

The midterm and final exam will be similar to the essays in substance and spirit but will take place in class. The final exam will take place sometime between December 5 and December 12; the precise date will be announced by the university later in the semester at the link below.¹ Students are also required to attend weekly sections, where they will discuss the course material in a thoughtful manner. Engaged participation in an international crisis simulation at the end of the semester is the final components of the course grade.

For each assignment, no extensions or makeups will be permitted except with a doctor’s note or a university letter documenting a conflict due to an athletic competition.

Technology Policy

Research that shows that students take better notes by hand² and that they learn less, both individually and collectively, when laptops are in the classroom.³ Therefore please silence and put away your cell phones and laptops before class.

Statement on Academic Conduct and Support

Plagiarism – presenting someone else’s ideas as your own, either verbatim or recast in your own words – is a serious academic offense with serious consequences. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Section 11, Behavior Violating University Standards.⁴ Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus and university policies on scientific misconduct.⁵ If you engage in plagiarism or any other form of academic misconduct, you will fail the course. If you aid someone else’s misconduct, you will fail the course.

Discrimination, sexual assault, and harassment are not tolerated by the university. You are encouraged to report any incidents to the Office of Equity and Diversity or to the Department of Public Safety. This is important for the safety of the whole USC community. Another member of the university community – such as a friend, classmate, advisor, or faculty member – can help initiate the report, or can initiate the report on behalf of another person. The Center for Women and Men provides 24/7 confidential support, and the sexual assault resource center webpage describes reporting options and other resources.

A number of USC’s schools provide support for students who need help with scholarly writing. Check with your advisor or program staff to find out more. Students whose primary language is not English should check with the American Language Institute, which sponsors courses and workshops specifically for international graduate students. The Office of Disability Services and Programs provides certification for students with disabilities and helps arrange the relevant accommodations. If an officially declared emergency makes travel to campus infeasible, USC Emergency Information will provide safety and other updates, including ways in which instruction will be continued by means of blackboard, teleconferencing, and other technology.

Students requesting academic accommodations based on disability are required to register with Disability Services and Programs (DSP) each semester. A letter of verification for approved accommodations can be obtained from DSP when adequate documentation is filed. Please be sure the letter is delivered to me as early in the semester as possible. DSP is open Monday-Friday, 8:30am–5:00pm. The office is in Student Union 301 and their phone number is 213.740.0776.
