

Contents

- I Worlds of Autocratic Propaganda 9

- 1 Introduction 11
 - 1.1 Strategies of Propaganda 11
 - 1.2 Antecedents, Historical and Theoretical 15
 - 1.3 Our Explanation 18
 - 1.4 Our Empirical Approach 22
 - 1.5 Democratic Institutions and Autocratic Politics 25
 - 1.6 Is Propaganda Driven by Politics or the Information Environment? 30
 - 1.7 Plan of the Book 30

- 2 A Theory of Autocratic Propaganda 33
 - 2.1 Introduction 33
 - 2.2 A Game of Public Goods and Uncertainty 33
 - 2.3 Theoretical Predictions 40
 - 2.4 Conclusion 44

- 3 Measuring Propaganda 45
 - 3.1 Introduction 45
 - 3.2 Identifying and Collecting State-Run Newspapers 45
 - 3.3 From Text to Article Level Data on Propaganda 51
 - 3.4 Our Data in Context 60
 - 3.5 Measuring Institutional Constraints 64
 - 3.6 Conclusion 65

- II The Substance of Propaganda 67

- 4 The Regime and the Opposition 69
 - 4.1 Introduction 69
 - 4.2 Theory 71
 - 4.3 Descriptive Statistics 73

4.4	The Valence and Frequency of Explicitly Political Coverage	80
4.5	Regression Discontinuity and Bayesian Change Point Models: How the Fall of the Berlin Wall was Heard in Gabon	92
4.6	Alternative Explanations: How Economic Change did Not Change Propaganda in China	104
4.7	Sentiment Dictionaries	113
4.8	Conclusion	114
5	Constructing a Domestic Narrative	117
5.1	Introduction	117
5.2	Issue Coverage Across Regimes	120
5.3	The Economy and Public Goods Provision	125
5.4	Democracy and Electoral Politics	134
5.5	Legal Affairs and Corruption	143
5.6	Nationalism, Sports, and Youth	149
5.7	Conclusion	157
6	Constructing an International Narrative	159
6.1	Introduction	159
6.2	International Cooperation	160
6.3	International News	182
6.4	China	192
6.5	Russia	196
6.6	Conclusion	212
III	Calendars of Propaganda	219
7	Threatening Citizens	221
7.1	Introduction	221
7.2	Theory	223
7.3	Cross-Country Evidence: China and Congo	227
7.4	Within-Country Evidence: Cameroon, English and French	234
7.5	During Moments of Crisis: Uzbekistan and Tunisia	243
7.6	Conclusion	254
8	Calendars of Propaganda	263
8.1	Introduction	263
8.2	Theory	266

8.3	Propaganda and Elections	273
8.4	Propaganda and Politically Sensitive Anniversaries	297
8.5	Conclusion	302
9	Conclusion	305
9.1	Retrospective	305
9.2	Prospective	306
9.3	Policy Implications	314
A	Appendix: Identifiers by Country	317
B	Appendix: Newspaper Summaries	319